FREE EASTER EGG HUNT

EGG-CITING FAMILY DAY AT SEASONS KALLANGUR

Hop on down to Seasons Kallangur for an egg-citing family day of Easter fun.

The Kallangur aged care community will open its gates to the public for an early Easter Celebration for local families on Saturday March 10, 2018 from 10am to 1pm.

The kids will be well entertained with an Easter egg hunt, free face painting, petting zoo and pony rides, while parents can browse the range of food and market stalls while enjoying the live entertainment.

Seasons Aged Care Events Manager Val Smith says the community event has been designed to bring together the wider community with Seasons residents, offering a chance for young and old to socialise and have fun.

"Our residents really look forward to having the fun come to them and many bake, make jams and craft items to sell on the day. I'm sure they will be whipping up plenty of Easter treats!" says Mrs Smith.

"The Easter Egg hunt will take place throughout the day and there will be some great prizes up for grabs in the monster raffle as well as food trucks and a sausage sizzle."

This free event is happening at Seasons Aged Care Kallangur, 1321 Anzac Avenue, Kallangur, from 10am till 1pm.

WHAT'S BETTER THAN A BEATLES CONCERT AT NORTH LAKES?

A FREE Beatles concert at North Lakes, that's what,

On Saturday 24th February a tribute to arguably the biggest band in history is heading to North Lakes Sports Club, with the free Beatlegs show on Saturday 24th February

The Beatlegs have been reproducing the iconic sound and look of the Fab Four with spot on harmonies and great music since 2008. They're renowned all across the country.

The Beatlegs are Queensland's only Beatles tribute band and a quick search on Youtube shows their impeccable mimicry, melodies and showmanship. The NLSC gig will showcase all of the original Beatles big ones.

While members and guest can enjoy the free show, there is also a reserved seat and dinner ticket option for just $45 per person.

"This ticket option includes a reserved seat, two-course buffet dinner, drink on arrival and pre-show live entertainment from 6pm to 9pm," NLSC's General Manager Chris Sartori said.

"However patrons should get in quick, as we have only a handful of these tickets remaining."

For more information or to purchase tickets, visit www.northlakessports.com.au or call 1300 006 572.

THE 39 STEPS

QUEENSLAND THEATRE REVIEW

Queensland Theatre cannot put a foot wrong, it seems. Following up a record breaking 2017 which saw Queensland Theatre productions shown in Sydney, Melbourne, London, and even Thursday Island, 2018 is setting the pace for another stunning season.

Following the five star reviewed Black is the New White (Messenger, February 10) Queensland Theatre's (QT) The 39 Steps which opened last Thursday is another triumph.

The 39 Steps is adapted by Patrick Barlow from the movie by Alfred Hitchcock (which itself is based on the novel by John Buchan). The Hitchcock film is a tale of an everyman caught up in a murder turned espionage plot.

The QT production, with an all Queensland cast, is also destined to be a classic - a classic farce. With just four actors playing 139 characters within the two hour play, the character changes provide the comedic baseline - some are made with smooth, almost contortionist choreography in front of the audience, others just off stage, but with the audience in on the gag - this alone is worth the price of admission.

The four actors; Hugh Parker, Liz Buchanan, Bryan Probets and Leon Cain populate the stage with various villains, spies, love interests, and clearly defined and acted characters along the way. The characters they play are so profoundly different from one moment to the next it's impressive just to watch them get it right. And they do, every time.

Set and costume designer Ailsa Paterson deserves special mention here, she has created a believable space in an outlandish world with a set that moves with as much pace as the cast.

I've seen a lot of theatre in the last couple of years and this is something special for theatre lovers. Amongst all this celebration of great classic theatre, there's some not so good news for those without tickets already; QT's The 39 Steps playing QPAC's Cremorne until March 24 - is entirely sold out already.

Keep your eye on these pages and we'll let you know about QT's next not-to-miss production. Until then visit www.queenslandtheatre.com.au for more info

For fans of farce and theatrical mastery, it's five stars.

If life is not too bad but you are unhappy, should you stick with the devil you know rather than risk the unknown?

Hi Leonie,

I was sitting in my doctor's office this morning reading one of your old columns and your response and about the miracle question. I was thinking that I would like to make changes as I am in a verbally abusive relationship.

My parents had a similar marriage to mine and they have stayed together. I like the idea of the Miracle question and I realised that my husband was not in my miracle day.

Is there anything else you can tell me? If life is not too bad but you are unhappy, should you stick with the devil you know rather than risk the unknown or the possibility of failing at something like a course.

For those of us that can cope, would you still advise setting new goals?

Kate/Redcliffe

Hi Kate,

Yes, I would. You don't have to be in fear of your life or destitute to want something better for yourself. When setting goals, you need to make sure that they are achievable and that you give yourself a reasonable time frame to create the desired changes. Looking at all the aspects of your life is a good way to create the future that you want. Look at your career: Is it rewarding or is it a job that saps your energy and your spirit? Look at your relationships: Are they mostly rewarding and happy? There is always some disharmony in every relationship and some ups and downs are a normal part of life, but when a relationship makes you feel belittled, humiliated, unsafe or just plain miserable, some re-evaluation is in order. And in some cases an exit strategy should be considered.

Knowing when to pull the pin on a relationship is just as important as knowing when to keep working on it. Just because your parents suffered through mistreatment or incompatibility is no reason for you to. I believe that not all relationships should be saved.

I encourage my clients to also think about what things they don't want as well as the changes that they would like to see manifest in their lives as they set goals for the future. For instance, you may decide that you will no longer tolerate domestic violence. You may decide that you will no longer be taken for granted and work on your assertive skills and learn to say "No" in a way that stops badgering and pressure. You may decide to never again allow toxic personalities into your life and start to cull those people who are affecting your happiness.

You need time to formulate your goals for the future so don't rush or go about it in an unplanned manner. Really put some strategic thinking into it like you would a business plan. You may choose to see a counsellor like myself and talk through the issues and really make a concerted and focused effort to map out your future desired life and strategise how to make it a reality.

Think about what needs to change and what steps you can take; how do you want to look and feel? What are the top five things in your life that cause you to feel unhappy?

Now some things you may not be able to change such as an estranged loved one or the death of someone close. In these cases it is still very worthwhile exploring how you can get some closure, deal more effectively with your grief and move towards acceptance. However, you are quite likely to list a number of things that you can change. These may include ending an abusive relationship, furthering your education/qualifications or working towards a better standard of living, and ultimately, a better retirement. It also may include just finding some simple Joy in life.

This is the only life we get here on earth, so put some effort into it. There are no martyrdom prizes for suffering a miserable life. Here's a quote Leo from Buscaglia, Author (1924- 1998) that I think says it all.

*"Change. It has the power to uplift, to heal, to stimulate, surprise, open new doors, bring fresh experience and create excitement in life.
Certainly, it is worth the risk."*

FREE LEGAL HELP FOR PEOPLE DEALING WITH PAYDAY LOANS

People who are struggling with payday loans can turn to Legal Aid Queensland for help, with the organisation providing free legal information and advice to Queenslanders experiencing financial hardship.

Senior consumer protection lawyer Paul Holmes said an increasing number of financially vulnerable people were using small amount or emergency loans to pay the bills or cover the costs of urgent car or white good repairs, and were struggling to keep up with repayments.

"People often turn to payday lenders when they are in financial need and can't get a loan from a mainstream lender," Mr Holmes said.

"We sometimes see people who take out a loan and then get sick or lose their job and can't make repayments, they then take out another loan to pay the original loan and are caught in a spiral of debt, struggling to pay for basic necessities.

"The ads on TV and radio make small amount loans seem so easy – and it has become easier to get online and access a short term loan – but the repercussions can be devastating for vulnerable families."

Mr Holmes said many people did not know that if they were having trouble paying back their debts there was help available under the law.

"If people are struggling to pay their loan they can ask their lender to vary the terms of their loans, like temporarily suspending repayments for a set period of time or having the repayment amount temporarily reduced while you get back on your feet," he said.

"The law also provides protections against unscrupulous lenders who have not met their obligations when assessing whether a person has the capacity to repay the loan.

"I'd encourage people who are experiencing financial hardship because of a short term or payday loan to contact Legal Aid Queensland and find out about their legal rights."

Legal Aid Queensland also has a range of publications about debt issues on its website www.legalaid.qld.gov.au. The publications can be ordered for free.

People can contact Legal Aid Queensland on 1300 65 11 88 to access free legal information and advice.

ARE ANXIETY DISORDERS RISING OR JUST OUR PERCEPTION?

BY DR ANITA, BRISBANE NORTH PHN

Anxiety disorders are among the most prevalent mental health conditions in Australia and many people argue they are more common now than ever before.

The word 'epidemic' is often used to describe an illness that seems out of control, affecting more and more people every day, and it's used frequently in the media when discussing anxiety disorders.

In a 2016 article written for Lifehacker.com.au, Canadian futurist and contributing editor George Dvorsky asks his readers 'Are we in the midst of an anxiety epidemic?'

He refers to anxiety's label as the Disease of the 21st Century and acknowledges how easy it is to think about the disorder this way, but questions the assumptions behind this.

It is important to note that an anxiety disorder is different to the normal feelings we might experience when we are under pressure. With a disorder, the feelings do not go away once the stressful situation has passed.

Anxiety disorders are the most prevalent mental health conditions in Australia, afflicting around one in seven people over 16 years of age – or 14.4 per cent of the population – according to the Australian Institute of Health and Welfare.

Yet prevalence does not necessarily prove the rate of anxiety disorders is increasing.

In fact, a study published last year in the Medical Journal of Australia, which looked at the number of people on disability support pensions for psychiatric conditions between 2001 and 2014, found the prevalence of anxiety in Australia was fairly stable.

Associate Professor Samuel Harvey from the Black Dog Institute said the study showed there was even a slight but significant decrease in the estimated prevalence of less severe depression and anxiety symptoms over that period.

"While this is promising for Australia, it should not be taken to mean that we have won the battle against these debilitating conditions, or that depression or anxiety are not having an increasingly dramatic impact on our society," A/Professor Harvey added.

"It is important to note that an anxiety disorder is different to the normal feelings we might experience when we are under pressure. With a disorder, the feelings do not go away once the stressful situation has passed."

So if anxiety disorders are not on the rise, what is giving us this impression?

One answer may lie in changing cultural attitudes to perfectionism, a field of study that has received considerable attention in Australia and overseas.

Perfectionism has been linked to anxiety disorders and a host of other mental health conditions, including depression, obsessive-compulsive disorder, eating disorders, post-traumatic stress disorder, chronic fatigue syndrome, insomnia, hoarding and dyspepsia.

It can also lead to chronic headaches, early mortality and sadly, even suicide.

In her recent article, 'The dangerous downsides of perfectionism', BBC journalist Amanda Ruggeri reveals her own struggle with this personality trait and delves into the research.

Ms Ruggeri describes how she felt 'deflated in a gut-punching way that went beyond disappointment', as the negative voices in her head drowned out the positive, after an agent told her that book idea she had pitched did not suit the market.

She is not alone. According to a recent meta-analysis of rates of perfectionism from 1989 to 2016, the first study to compare perfectionism across generations, it is becoming more common.

Ms Ruggeri argues that this is because culturally, we often see perfectionism as a positive, and the studies tend to back this up.

A disproportionate focus on achievement and the way society links this to our sense of identity, academically, professionally and socially, appears to drive people towards perfectionism and this causes enormous suffering for people predisposed to anxiety disorders.

The antidote, according to the research, may lie in self-compassion – a simple solution – but the very thing perfectionists lack. Be kind to yourself and reap the rewards.

YOUR STARS

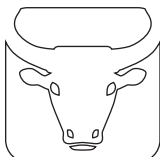

Aquarius Jan 21-Feb 19: You can see how two parties are doing themselves more harm than good. Nevertheless, dysfunctional relationships have a logic all their own.

Pisces Feb 20-March 20: Don't buy the guilt trip! If someone's working that hard to make you feel bad then it means they're not worth it!

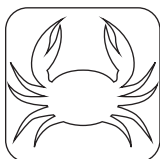

Aries March 21-April 20: A certain someone decides to give you another chance. Make the most of it, because there won't be a next time.

Taurus April 21-May 21: You never know what slips out, so maybe stick to answering yes and no questions.

Gemini May 22-June 21: Yield on those issue and you'll soon be yielding on another. The best way to prevent a row of dominos from falling is to not allow the first one to go.

Cancer June 22-July 23: Promises may have been made to you without the guarantor's knowledge. Prepare to take a certain go between to task.

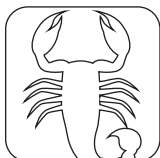

Leo July 24-Aug 23: Put as much distance as you can between you and a certain matter. You won't be under its shadow for long. It will soon be somebody else's problem.

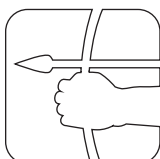

Virgo Aug 24-Sept 23: Watch your cynical side. One remark is all it takes for certain oversensitive types to get bent out of shape.

Libra Sept 24-Oct 23: You're not exactly known for being decisive, but having one of your closest friends not being able to make an easy decision has you thinking that any decision at this point will do.

Scorpio Oct 24-Nov 22: one of the hardest things for you to learn is to rely on someone. A tough time shouldn't be suffered alone. Let it bring you closer together.

Sagittarius Nov 23-Dec 21: Don't lose your temper. You could play right into someone's hands. Maintain a calm demeanour until you have a clearer idea of what's what.

Capricorn Dec 22-Jan 20: Repay a favour or obligation pronto. Not only is it the right thing to do, but you could use some positive karma right about now.

TOP DECORATING TIPS

IKEA North Lakes shares top rental decorating tips

IKEA knows decorating pretty well. You don't get to be the world's largest furniture retailer without learning a thing or two about what works inside the actual spaces that we live in.

Recently, the interior design boffins from the big blue box at North Lakes left the showroom and headed into the field (as they do all over the country) to find out more about the way we live and how we can improve our lifestyle through creatively functional use of space.

This initiative, as part of the IKEA + you project, was created with a desire to inspire Australians to live a better everyday life at home. IKEA's designers interviewed various families about these spaces and what frustrates them about their home. As part of this process, the team designed and implemented a living room makeover for a family home at Enoggera.

Learning from real-world/real-people informs the creative solutions you see in IKEA's showrooms. In fact, the Enoggera redesign was so successful they recreated the family's actual living room at IKEA North Lakes (you can see it yourself in-store on Level 2).

The Messenger spoke to the family at the launch of the recreated space last week and praised IKEA for their simple, functional and practical approach. They told us that working with a designer was a great experience in which their input was respected and used and that the result was a huge success for their family.

Given that we can't all have personal designers attend our houses for a personalised makeover, IKEA's Interior Design Leader Christine Gough had these tips to share with us:

Get creative with your layout

The old space had an awkward layout as it is used as a main thoroughfare to get through to the kitchen/dining area but also to the front of the house. To create a space that flows seamlessly, we looked at how the space was used, what activities take place there and what is required from the area. For this area we needed to create three zones in the space for; watching television and relaxing, a workspace and a play area for the kids. What they did:

- Pull the sofa off the back wall, to create a better flow and add structure to the living room
- A big rug helps define an area and in this space a big, comfortable and inviting rug provides the perfect place for board games, pizza and movie nights in front of the television. It is also handy when you need to hide marks and stains on the floor from previous tenants.
- Created a dedicated space for work and study, where the parents can get their paperwork done and store their files. Kids can also use the space for homework and playing computer games. The space is tucked into a corner to ensure that it doesn't affect the flow of the space but is still impactful in its look and feel and blends seamlessly with the rest of the living room.

Create impact with colour

Your home is a personal and unique space that reflects who you are, so the colour and your furnishings are very important – but they can also impact how a space feels. When you can't make too many changes to a rental, how you use textures and colours in a space make it feel more personal. We used these simple tips:

- Colour. Limiting your colour palette to three hues creates a clean, cohesive look. You can try combining bright and neutral shades to create harmony and contrast. In this space we have used warm colours combined with tactile, natural and handmade materials to soften the space and add depth to the palette
- Pattern. Add patterns and natural materials within your colour palette. The colours will tie them together, while the different sizes will help create subtle interest.
- Material. Texture brings it all together. Using natural materials like jute or rattan helps to unite your palette and patterns all while adding soft warmth to your room.

In this home we used the blue already on the walls to dictate the colour scheme for the room. We chose a deep navy cotton sofa, and offset this with natural creams and woods along with splashes of black to create a dramatic finish.

Don't forget about lighting

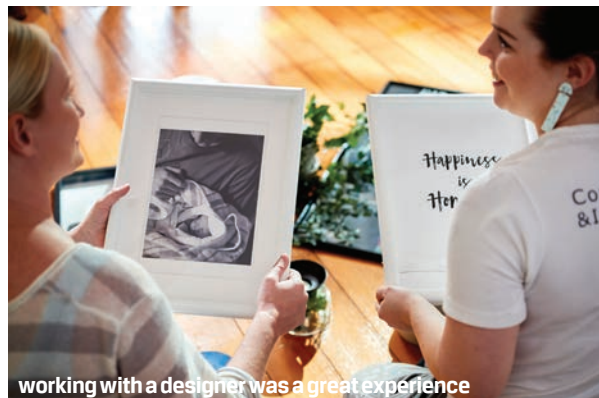

The amount of lighting in the area was limited as the living room is surrounded by other little rooms. With the original layout there was no room/space for lamps to be incorporated. The lighting in the room proved challenging, without the front door open, it is especially dark in the area.

- When natural light is limited we recommend using layers of lights to get the perfect level of brightness.
- Lighting can be used to create contrasts so that a space does not appear flat. General lighting provides a uniform light throughout a space and the beautiful HEKTAR floor lamp adds an elegant look along with providing great light to the space.
- Task lighting provides concentrated light over a specific area to enable certain jobs to be done. No more boring old work stations – we used a combination of desk lamps to light up the work area, – mixing textures, colours and looks to create a playful look that brings personality to the space.
- Mood lighting softens the contrasts between general and task light to create a tranquil, intimate setting. Dotted around the room are lamps to create a cosy and comforting atmosphere that will help the family wind down at the end of the day.

Let your personality shine

As the home is a rental the family cannot attach frames to the wall, which makes adding life and personal touches more challenging. To overcome this challenge we layered different sized framed prints, photos and quotes on top of our storage cupboards and desks. This is the easiest way to create impact in a rental without drilling into the wall.

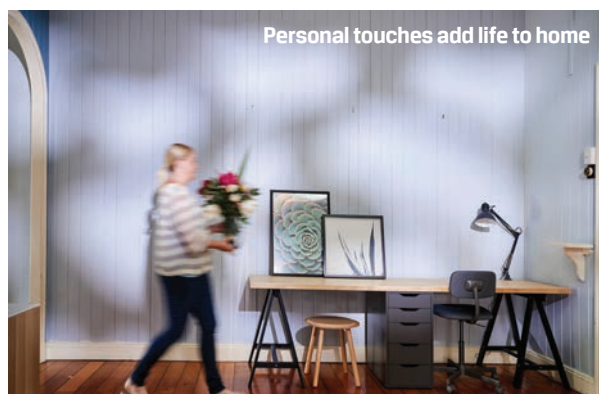

To finish the space, while plants and greenery may not always make your space feel bigger, there are other benefits for 'bringing the outside in'. Plants and greenery can help connect or pull together your space and help bring a sense of wellbeing into your home.

working with a designer was a great experience

Use layers of lights to get the perfect level of brightness

Personal touches add life to home

The finished result was huge success the family said

A word from our clients...

23 Leichhardt Street, North Lakes
Rebecca & Lawrence

"As new residents in the country only a few months ago, we were very naive when it came to selling our home. We have had a tough few months and didn't realise how much a good agent is worth.

We assumed it was the same as England where anyone can sell a house. If there is one piece of advice I can give anyone in this area, it's get these two on board when selling your house. We had a bad experience previously and the Wilkie's have restored our faith.

They have positivity, realism and your best interest at heart. They went above and beyond to seal the deal selling our house day and night. Their communication and manner is just fantastic. They are absolutely amazing at what they do and how they treat people on both sides of the market is just second to none day or night!

Highly highly recommend Team Wilkie and will be calling on their services in the future if we ever need to buy or sell again. Thanks Team Wilkie!"

A word from our clients...

"Darren sold us our block of land 9 years ago. When it came time to sell our home, we reviewed and met with a few agents - Darren was a definite stand out. Everything was very easy from our initial discussions, through to photos/listing and the offer process. We were delighted to receive 2 great offers on the day after our first open home. Darren is on call at any time, on any day.

We are very happy we entrusted the sale of our home with Darren and the team at Ray White North Lakes/Mango Hill."
