WHAT DO YOU USUALLY DO FOR EARTH HOUR?

Here's something different

HOTA's Concert for the Planet, a moment in musical time not to be missed: March 24

What do you usually do for Earth Hour? Turn off the lights off and sit in the dark, waiting for the hour to finish? Maybe you wander outside to see if the neighbours are doing Earth Hour too, right? How about mixing it up this year with a free outdoor concert.

Earth Hour started as a symbolic lights out event in Sydney in 2007, but is now celebrated in more than 180 countries and territories as a global moment of solidarity for the planet.

As WWF's landmark movement, Earth Hour is set to once again unite millions of people around the world to show their commitment to the planet. As our one shared home faces the dual challenge of climate change and plummeting biodiversity, the world's largest grassroots movement for the environment aims to mobilize individuals, businesses and governments to be a part of the conversation and solutions needed to build a healthy, sustainable future – and planet – for all.

This year, rather than just sit in the dark while the rest of the planet goes dark, The Gold Coast is set to shine for Earth Hour with Concert for the Planet.

In celebration of Earth Hour on Saturday March 24, HOTA, Home of the Arts presents an evening of discovery and symphonic experience – CONCERT FOR THE PLANET – a free musical event that will transform the parkland into a live music soundscape, with musicians from all over the world taking part via a worldwide livestream.

The Gold Coast Philharmonic Orchestra, extended to include over 100 local musicians, will perform Holst's The Planets under the baton of conductor Lachlan Snow. Fittingly, the Gold Coast Philharmonic Orchestra is the first full orchestra to perform on the recently launched state-of-the-art $37.5 million outdoor stage.

This spectacular concert will be live-streamed globally and with the help of innovative technology, such as the Conductor-Cam, musicians and communities will be able to join in and play along during the performance.

Following the free Tim Minchin concert on March 17 which officially launches the HOTA Outdoor Program, the performance on March 24 is the second-ever Concert for the Planet following the first in 2015 in Sydney.

"This is going to be a brilliant moment in musical time, with an extraordinary repertoire in Holst's The Planets," said HOTA CEO Crena Gehrke. "We're inviting music lovers of all ages to bring a picnic to enjoy a truly memorable evening under the stars!"

On the evening of the event the HOTA precinct will be brought alive with music. Activity begins from 5pm with sustainable and environmentally focused community and art stalls, visual art installations by Gold Coast favourites Clayton Blake and Guy Cooper, and performance and interactive art activities including dancing, drumming, children's activities and more.

HOTA has partnered with the Global Orchestra Foundation in a commitment to make positive change for the future. In response to Earth Hour attendees are asked to bring reusable water bottles and make use of the free water stations around the venue, carpool or use public transport to get to the event and to use the recycling services available on-site or take rubbish home for appropriate disposal.

The performance will conclude at the start of Earth Hour 2018 in Queensland. The lights will be turned down, and guests are asked to bring a torch to assist in exiting the venue safely.

The Global Orchestra was founded in 2013 with the idea of combining technology and creativity – for the sake of the planet. During Earth Hour in March 28, 2015 the inaugural Concert for the Planet was performed by the Sydney Symphony Orchestra, a mass participation, multi-location, first of its kind performance of Holst's The Planets. Musicians and communities played their parts to mark their commitment to a sustainable future for Planet Earth.

Global Orchestra has created musical arrangements, instructional videos, lesson plans and information packs for participants to play their part on the big night. The Conductor-Cam guides players through the bar numbers and counts players in to ensure everyone follows the score. Players interested in taking part in the March 24 concert should register at globalorchestra.com/register.

Concert for the Planet is the second in HOTA's ground-breaking Outdoor Program following a full house free Tim Minchin concert. The program is based on the spectacular new outdoor stage.

Concert for the Planet outdoor activities start at 5pm and the main concert starts at 7.30pm

THE LAKES COLLEGE NEW $3.6M SECONDARY SCHOOL PRECINCT

The Lakes College officially opened the second stage of its secondary school precinct last Friday, 16 March. Stage 1 was completed in 2017. The new precinct includes six new classrooms, a senior's area including a lounge, kitchen area, staff room, locker spaces and outdoor learning hub.

The Lakes College Principal Mr Simon Armstrong described the opening as a significant part of our expanding chapter of the College.

"North Lakes is one of the fastest growing areas in Queensland and this development is great for the potential of the local community to continue to grow.

"Our new secondary building will benefit our secondary students, College and the wider community in so many ways, as it has wonderful innovative learning hub and resources," Mr Armstrong said.

"It's been purpose built and architecturally designed to meet the needs of our more than 400 secondary school students.

"We pride ourselves at The Lakes College for our unique approach to inspirational and innovative learning and this new facility will help us achieve that.

"The Lakes College has grown from just 88 students when we opened our doors in 2005, to a College with a total population of 831 students from Prep to Year 12.

"From the Lakes College community, I thank the State Government for its generous contribution, and the partnership approach it has shared with us in developing our new building."

BRISBANE STREET ART FESTIVAL 2018

Street artists from around the world will gather in Brisbane to create 50 new large scale murals for the city

The 2018 Brisbane Street Art Festival (BSAF) will once again take over walls across Brisbane from March 31 - April 15, with new 50 large scale murals to be created in sites across the city.

Now in its third year and fully entrenched in the cultural landscape, the 2018 BSAF offers its biggest program ever with more than 50 Australian and international artists will create 50 large scale murals in South Brisbane, Spring Hill, Fortitude Valley, Paddington, Annerley and Brisbane's CBD - double the number of murals created in 2017.

Notable works will transform Fish Lane, a Telstra Exchange Building, Ric's Bar and Brisbane Powerhouse thanks to spaces provided by partners ARIA Property Group, Brisbane City Council (BCC), Brisbane Powerhouse, Ric's and Telstra.

Festival organisers have curated street art masters from Malaysia, Indonesia, Hong Kong, England, Colombia and Mexico to join leading Australian artists such as Sofles, Gus Eagleton, Fuzelliar, Emmanuel Moore, The Brightsiders, Sindy Sinn, Shida and Sirmano, many who hail from Brisbane.

Colombian artist Gris One will join Hong Kong's self-taught street art queen Bao Ho, Mexican calligraphy specialist Said Dokins, Malaysian artists Kenji Chai and Cloakwork, London geometric guru Rosie Wood and Indonesian artist Tuyuloveme to paint their first ever works in Australia.

Festival Director Lincoln Savage said street art is helping redefine the city of Brisbane.

"The program is bigger and better and signals Brisbane's creative potential, we encourage all locals and visitors to come out during BSAF to see new artworks created before their eyes," said Mr Savage

"This year seven international artists are joining us for the festival, including six who have chosen to paint their first Australian work in Brisbane, which speaks volumes about our ability to attract great artists and the recognition the international community has for our burgeoning street art culture."

Festival organisers have been working closely with Alethea Beetson, director of Digi Youth Arts, to ensure the program supports and nurtures Indigenous artists and the murals reflect stories of their people. Mexican artist Said Dokins will paint a large mural on the Telstra Exchange building in Spring Hill, lending his style of street calligraphy to a piece focusing on keeping Indigenous languages alive.

Brisbane art duo Land Writers, known individually as Warraba Weatherall and Daniel Jones, will also make their mark on the city, transforming the laneway at 181 George Street with what will be a moving piece.

Led by Indigenous artists Dylan Mooney, Tori-Jay Mordey and Kiana Larkins, nine artists will gather to create temporary artworks on the QPAC Cultural Forecourt as part of Festival 2018, the Gold Coast 2018 Commonwealth Games' statewide free arts and cultural program. The artists will work together to create works that celebrate Brisbane and pave the way for a shared vision of the future.

Another highlight of BSAF will be Within These Walls, a major one-month long exhibition featuring works of all shapes and sizes from 50 local and international artists at Brisbane Powerhouse, opening on Thursday 12 April.

Cezary Stulgis will also team up with Australian street art legend Benjamin Reeve for a momentous return to paint a new mural on the Brisbane Powerhouse. Cezary last graced the building's walls over 20 years ago before it was transformed into the building it is today, with two of his works on the building now heritage protected artworks.

BSAF also provides an important platform for emerging artists. This year BCC has provided four city-owned public walls as canvasses, two of which will be painted by artists involved in the BCC Youth Art development program, which links emerging talent with industry veterans.

The festival will kick off bang on Sunday 1 April with a free launch party at Ric's in Fortitude Valley. Brisbane veterans Drapl and Treazy will paint a mural in the bar's backyard area and live music will be provided by The Gametes, FeelsClub, Desmond Cheese and YELLOWCATREDCAT. The launch will also see the resurrection of Scribble Slam, a live art battle between two artists, Bao Ho and Sunshine Coast artist EJ Zyla. Each artist will create a work focused on a theme that is revealed on the night, with one artist to be crowned the winner. Scribble Scram will be a monthly event at Ric's with a rotating lineup of artists.

IN MY RELATIONSHIP, I WEAR THE BLAME FOR EVERYTHING THAT GOES WRONG

Hello Leonie,

I have a problem which is a bit silly I guess. In my marriage I don't do anything of any importance without long discussions with my husband and his approval.

I swear that I always feel that we have come to an agreement on matters. I have been married to my husband for over 20 years and whenever there is a situation that has turned sour or a decision that has gone bad, my husband always says that it was MY decision and that he did not agree to anything.

So you see, I wear the blame for everything that goes wrong. But if things turn out very well, or even just OK, suddenly it was his planning and idea and he takes credit for the decision, particularly around others.

Another thing that happens between us is that I will suggest something or other and then weeks or months later, he will say that he has a great idea which was the original one that I came up with.

I know that this is nothing like the problems that you probably see on a daily basis, but its driving me nuts. I am really starting to dislike my husband and I have very little respect for him now.

Does this happen to others and is it common? I would be grateful for your views on this.

Karen/Clontarf

Hi Karen,

This is not a problem that is isolated to your husband. I believe that human beings have a great capacity to re-write history. It's not just in the decision-making side of relationships (although this is very common) but also in the day to day dynamics of interacting with others.

For instance, some people can say and do the most hurtful things and never give it another thought. However, when their partner has had enough and call them on their nasty comments, they may claim to have never have said such a thing at all. Often, one partner will be continually hurt by callous 'throw away' comments and this may begin to show in a tendency to withdraw affection or just withdrawal in general in an effort to protect themselves from further emotional abuse. The offending partner may then ask what the matter is and when told of the hurtful things they have said or done, totally deny it ever happening.

I also see the phenomena of people using language incorrectly or in the wrong context and the other person taking their comments literally and interpreting what is said verbatim. The offending partner then offers some trite excuse such as,

"I didn't mean it like that" Or "I used the wrong words, it's not what I was meaning to say"

Now this can lead the wronged party to start doubting themselves and sometimes feel that they are going crazy or as you put it "NUTS". So, you can see that this is indeed a common problem and I don't think that there are too many people who haven't experienced or are yet to experience, this type of toxic interplay at least once in their lives.

Now on the flip side, often times when we are recovering from a broken relationship and grieving we may only remember all the good stuff and forget all the things that made the relationship unviable.

I advise my clients to keep a diary of all the times they have been treated badly, belittled, humiliated or felt sad about their relationship and to be as honest and non-subjective as possible in the recording. This often helps as a tool to remind them of all the things that happened and help them more accurately predict whether or not a relationship can be saved. We must think about all that was good and all that was bad to get a balanced and truthful assessment of the health of a relationship. This works both ways. Sometimes we can imagine that something is far worse than it is and a little honest reflection by way of diarised entries can have us seeing things much clearer.

Til next week, Leonie

The research also revealed 43.1 percent of Brisbane commuters wanted improved public transport services and almost 20 percent wanted to see specific roads upgraded or widened.

Mr Turner said all levels of government should prioritise investment in roads and transport infrastructure.

"We need governments to prioritise road projects which will enhance our network's efficiency and safety, and by investing in key public transport projects, we'll see an improvement to our city's commute time," he said.

"An effective and connected public transport system, where projects like Brisbane Metro and Cross River Rail complement the evolving transport system, will also reduce pinch points in the public transport network."

LOCAL COMMUTERS ARE CRAWLING TO WORK

The State's peak motoring body has revealed Brisbane residents had the slowest commute time in the south east, despite only needing to travel a relatively short distance to work.

The new RACQ research, which surveyed south east Queenslanders about their daily commute, found Brisbane locals spent an average of 30.8 minutes getting to work and travelled a distance of 14.8km, at just 29.8km/h.

Meanwhile, Moreton Bay commuters travelled longer distances but at a quicker speed, with an average of 43.8km/h, that's nearly 66% of locals, according to the ABS.

RACQ spokesperson Paul Turner said the data would not surprise Brisbane commuters who

It might still feel like summer but it's now officially autumn, so if your 2018 health goals have taken a backseat, you may need a catalyst.

One of the easiest ways to motivate and push yourself is to take part in an organised event, so that you have a deadline to work towards. Once you register, the countdown to get fit begins.

Getting active has both immediate and long-term health benefits! At least one-third of all cancers in Queensland are preventable through healthy lifestyle choices, including being active and maintaining a healthy weight.

To motivate Queenslanders, Cancer Council Queensland CEO Ms Chris McMillan, an active runner herself, is sharing five tips to help people get started on their fitness journey.

One, don't go it alone. Queenslanders right across the state can join Team CCQ – an active community encouraging runners to lace up for the cause. Alternatively, enlist a friend to be your gym partner or get involved with your local Parkrun each week to meet fellow fitness enthusiasts. Make sure to involve your family too, as they are often a great support. They'll enjoy watching you on your journey and may even be convinced to join you on it.

Two, set your timeline. Choose the fun run, marathon or triathlon you want to take part in. Make sure your goal is realistic, so if you are a beginner complete a shorter endurance event like a 5km or 10km if you only have three to six months to prepare.

Three, get the right gear. Find exercise clothes and shoes that are comfortable to move in and that you feel confident wearing. If you only have very old runners or worn socks, then invest in a new pair – the last thing you want is to start your fitness journey and slip from a lack of tread or have blisters.

GET ACTIVE, GET INSPIRED WITH ORGANISED EVENTS

Team CCQ shares five tips for getting fitter

Four, start small and start early. Schedule in when you will exercise each week to make sure you follow through and tailor your training program to your fitness level. While some of your workouts can be shorter, you should include at least one weekly long run to build up your endurance. As a beginner speed isn't important, and many people find it useful to start by running for five minutes and then walking for one minute to allow for recovery and gradually build up fitness.

Five, look at the big picture to keep your body in good health and prevent injury. A balanced diet will allow you to fuel yourself for the runs, whilst making sure you have enough sleep will help with your energy levels. Make sure to stay hydrated and SunSmart for your runs and don't forget to stretch. Plus, schedule in strength and conditioning sessions to help prevent injuries and stay on top of sore spots by rolling out or having a massage. Team CCQ, a community fitness movement, has been founded as part of Cancer Council's Get Moving campaign to encourage runners, gym-goers and fitness enthusiasts across Queensland to lace up their joggers and support the cause together.

There are lots of ways to get involved!

On June 30 -July 1, Team CCQ members will be among the 25,000 people partaking in the 40th edition of the Gold Coast Marathon. Eight races will take place on the flat, fast and scenic course.

Team CCQ members can also participate in Bridge to Brisbane, taking in some of Brisbane's most iconic landmarks, in a 5km or 10km run or walk.

Becoming a member of Team CCQ also gives Queenslanders access to free nutrition and exercise tips, discounted entry to select events, fundraising rewards, and access to a personal fundraising advisor.

QUEENSLAND THEATRE'S 2018 SEASON

Following two five star reviews, what's next For Queensland Theatre?

Back in Messenger February 10, 2018, we reviewed Queensland Theatre's showing of Black is the New White at five stars, calling it the funniest play we'd ever seen. Exactly one month later (Messenger March 10, 2018), we reviewed Queensland Theatre's The 39 Steps again at five stars. We felt a little guilty about The 39 Steps given that by the time you read the review, the show's entire run had completely sold out. So to make up, we're letting you know what's coming up for the rest of the year.

Queensland Theatre (QT) under the helm of Artistic Director Sam Strong is going from strength to strength. In fact, late last year, after Mr Strong's first year in the role, it was announced that 2017 was a record-breaker.

"I'm so proud of 2017 - my first year as Artistic Director and our first as Queensland Theatre. I want to thank our audiences for a record breaking year. Together, we've created our highest selling show ever in Brisbane, our highest selling year ever in the history of the company, and the highest number of subscribers in 20 years," he said at the time.

"No other theatre company in the country has had our geographic footprint."

"In 2017, you could see Queensland Theatre shows in 2000 seat theatres in Sydney and Melbourne, in a festival in London, or in an outdoor venue on Thursday Island, in the Torres Strait. We played to audiences from Cairns to Perth to Albury Wodonga. In 2017, we have reached more people outside Brisbane than the Sydney Theatre Company reached outside Sydney in 2016."

It seems QT is attracting traditional theatre audiences and newcomers alike.

While it won't be officially stated until after the season, 2018 seems likely to break the records that were only just set with eight extraordinary shows (two down, six to go) including six new Australian stories and four world premieres. QT's 2018 features an incredibly star-studded casts across the season. Let's take a look at the remaining productions.

TWELFTH NIGHT

2018 sees us return to Shakespeare and the classic repertoire. Twelfth Night is one of Shakespeare's most popular plays because it is one of his most complete. It's the perfect balance of melancholy and joy - as much about the pain of getting older or being left behind as it is about the thrill of falling in love. Twelfth Night is also Shakespeare's most musical play and our version will feature a suite of original, new songs by maestro Tim Finn as well as a luscious design by Tracy Grant Lord.

THE LONGEST MINUTE

Sport makes great theatre - its spectacle and drama, its heroes and villains, and its ability to inspire agony and ecstasy. The end of the 2015 NRL Grand Final between the Broncos and the Cowboys is a case in point. The Longest Minute explodes open these climactic moments to tell us the story of that unforgettable game, the underdog triumph of the 21 year history of the Cowboys, and the story of a family of footy fans following their dreams.

GOOD MUSLIM BOY

This is a show built around the extraordinary life of Osamah Sami. It's a tender portrait of a father-son relationship, a fascinating insight into faith in contemporary Australia, and a knife edge thriller about trying to get a loved one's body out of Iran and find humanity in the sea of chaos. It just so happens that as well as having an incredible tale to tell, co-creator and performer Osamah Sami is one of our most engaging, endearing and enjoyable stage presences.

JASPER JONES

Craig Silvey's story has captured the nation's imagination like few before it: a best-selling novel that has become a contemporary classic, a theatrical adaptation that has created three different sell-out productions, and most recently an acclaimed feature film. It's been so successful because it so completely transports us into the shoes of its teenage heroes while taking us back to a time when the nation was also coming of age. Kate Mulvany's award winning adaptation renders the book in all its dimensions, from the gripping whodunnit to the triumphant country cricket game. Anna Cordingley's Helpmann Award-winning design unforgettably puts the Australian landscape (not to mention an entire country town) on stage. A re-staging of the Melbourne Theatre Company production.

NEARER THE GODS

David Williamson has been this nation's preeminent storyteller for close to half a century. This is because he has an amazing ability to put his finger on the zeitgeist - to know exactly what stories need to be told right now. Here, he crafts a riveting drama-of-ideas out of a turning point in the history of science. David zooms in on the relationship between Edmund Halley and Isaac Newton, and the struggle to publish theories that would change the world. Nearer the Gods is an urgent world premiere about how even the noblest ideas are at the mercy of politics and ego.

HEDDA

Hedda showcases a triumvirate of incredibly talented women. Danielle Cormack is an actor with the power and sense of danger you need to tackle one of drama's greatest heroines. Playwright Melissa Bubnic has the wicked turn of phrase and pitch black humour to wrench a 19th century classic into the here and now. And director Paige Rattray has an ability to unleash performances that become seared into memory. Throw in a poolside set and a stellar local cast and Hedda promises to be the must see event of Brisbane in 2018.

With Black is the New White closing each night to standing ovations and The 39 Steps sold out in record time, it's important to get your tickets as early as possible.

Twelfth Night, The Longest Minute and Good Muslim Boy tickets are on sale now, while Jasper Jones, Nearer the Gods and Hedda go on sale from Monday, April 30 2018 at 9am. Hurry along to get them via www.queenslandtheatre.com.au or by calling 1800 355 528

LOCAL GEM AN EVERYDAY HERO

North Lakes' Alexis Young Miss Teen Diamond finalist is raising money for Ronald McDonald House

Local 18 year old Alexis Young is a finalist in the Miss & Mr Diamond Australia in the Teen category.

Alexis is sponsored by Jam Performing Arts at North Lakes, owned by her elder sister Danica Edge.

Alexis has been fund raising for her charity Ronald McDonald House and has held a Perfectly Pink Pamper night and created Easter buckets she is selling. She has just reached $1000 for her efforts.

Ronald McDonald House provides accommodation and support services for seriously ill children and their families and there are 16 located around Australia and in total 360 around the world.

The houses help to preserve the family unit in the midst of physical, emotional and financial stress and give the parents the chance to draw on hope and comfort from other families in similar situations. The aim is to be like a home away from home.

After finishing Year 12 at The Lakes College last year, Alexis has taken a year off to dance more and is a student teacher at Jam. Alexis successfully auditioned for the Commonwealth Games Opening performance and has quite a few more auditions on the horizon.

The Miss Teen Diamond grand final will be held in Brisbane on Saturday 7 April.

To donate to Ronald McDonald House and help Alexis with her fund raising an everydayhero account has been set up. Donations are tax deductible and the link is www.rmhcseq.everydayhero.com.au/alexis

BUTT OUT FOR BETTER HEARING

BY DR ANITA, BRISBANE NORTH PHN

Tobacco smokers are more likely than non-smokers to experience hearing loss, according to a new study, but the risk from smoking quickly disappears when they quit.

One in seven Australians suffer from hearing loss – around 3.6 million people – and this is projected to increase to one in every four Australians by 2050.

The main reasons this condition is increasing include long-term exposure to excessive noise in the workplace and the environment, and an ageing population. Three in every four people aged over 70 years have hearing loss.

Now an eight-year study of more than 50,000 Japanese workers, aged between 20 and 64 years, has found that current smokers are 60 percent more likely to develop high-frequency hearing loss compared to non-smokers.

When people are unable to hear sounds in the higher level of frequencies, they often find it difficult to understand speech. This is because they miss the consonant letters such as F, H and S, and the problem gets worse in noisy environments.

Published in the Oxford Academic journal Nicotine & Tobacco Research, the study is thought to be the largest to date investigating the association between smoking and incident hearing loss.

The researchers found current smokers were also 20 percent more likely to develop hearing loss in the low frequency range that makes difficult to detect deep voices.

According to Reuters, lead study author Huanhuan Hu at the National Center for Global Health and Medicine in Tokyo said the risk of hearing loss was higher the more a person smoked.

"Quitting smoking virtually eliminates the excess risk of hearing loss, even among quitters with short duration of cessation," Hu said.

"Because the risk of hearing loss increases with the number of cigarettes smoked per day, if quitting is impossible people should still smoke as little as possible," he said.

At the start of the study, participants were typically in their 40s and about 19,000 were current smokers, Reuters reported. About 9,800 of the participants were former smokers and 21,000 had never smoked.

Current smokers were more likely to be overweight or obese, have chronic health problems like high blood pressure and diabetes, and work in jobs with higher levels of occupational noise.

Each year during the study, participants had comprehensive hearing tests. After eight years, more than 5,100 people developed hearing loss.

While this was not a controlled experiment designed to prove causality, Hu said the results showed it was possible that nicotine exposure may damage the ears.

A reliance on participants accurately reporting their smoking habits was identified as a limitation of the study, as was control over occupational noise exposure for all of the people in the study.

Nevertheless, these latest findings add to a growing body of evidence suggesting that smoking can contribute to hearing loss.

If you need to get your ears tested, Medicare will cover hearing assessments and consultations with an audiologist in certain circumstances when referred by an eligible medical practitioner. Your audiologist may charge a gap fee for your appointment.

Some private health insurers may also provide rebates for hearing assessments and the fitting of hearing aids and other devices.

It is also important to note that children and young people under 26 years of age are among those eligible for hearing services subsidised through the Australian Government Hearing Services Program.

Veterans' Affairs Gold Card holders and Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people over 50 years of age are also eligible.

To check your eligibility for Government-subsidised hearing services, go to www.hearingservices.gov.au.

YOUR STARS

Aquarius Jan 21-Feb 19: Be flexible with your outlook these days. Expectations may not be realised, but needs are fulfilled. You are on the right path.

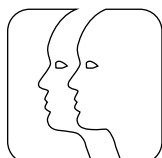

Pisces Feb 20- March 20: A boss wants you. The question is do you want to be there? Only you can answer. Meanwhile stop trying to push this onto his plate.

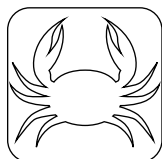

Aries March 21- April 20: You want answers now, but be patient. The longer it takes someone to get back in touch, the better the outcome for you.

Taurus April 21-May 21: Now that you've won a dispute, you wonder if you were right to pursue it. Not the time for second thoughts. You need to show confidence.

Gemini May 22-June 21: Its vexing to have to draft and redraft a plan, but coming up with new ideas proves you've got more to say. Plumb the depths of ingenuity.

Cancer June 22 July 23: Your reading more into someone's disinterest than it deserves. There's such a thing as being preoccupied. Peoples self absorption has nothing to do with you.

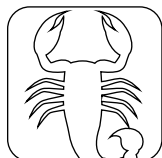

Leo July 24-Aug 23: What's more important- coming down hard on someone or sending a strong message? That you show leniency in the matter shows confidence.

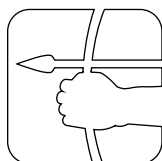

Virgo Aug 24-Sept 23: You want the best for loved ones, but do protective instincts serve their interests? You may be hindering when you should be encouraging.

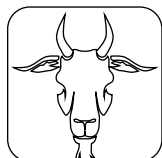

Libra Sept 24-Oct 23: You get a second hearing. There's no guarantee it will reverse the situation, but it gives you a chance to polish points and make your case.

Scorpio Oct 24-Nov 22: Fear and trembling is never pleasant, but turning heel and going back the way you came is worse. Persevere. You're on the right path.

Sagittarius Nov 23-Dec 21: It pays to play by the book but sometimes you have to finesse. Seeing as you may come up short, it's best to bluff about what's in hand.

Capricorn Dec 22-Jan 20: A newcomer replaces and old ally. This leaves you feeling uncomfortable. Then again it can also be said you're clearing out dead wood.

WIDESPREAD CONCERN ON HOUSING AFFORDABILITY AND RETIREMENT

New research on attitudes to property investment and saving for retirement has revealed widespread concern over affordable housing and support from a majority of non-property investors for changes to negative gearing.

The research released at the recent Conference of Major Super Funds in Brisbane - revealed that four out of five of those surveyed were concerned that rising housing prices are locking young people out of the property market and that - even among property investors - there is some support to modify negative gearing.

The research - commissioned by Australian Institute of Superannuation Trustees (AIST) and conducted by Essential Media - found that 55 per cent of non-investors (in property) would support changes to negative gearing. Just over one third of property investors also supported changes to negative gearing, with support highest (45%) among those with children.

The survey also found that 95% of investors said security in retirement was an important factor in influencing their decision to purchase an investment property. Minimising the amount of tax they paid was another motivating factor for 74% of investors.

The survey - conducted from late February to early March 2018 and involving both in-depth family interviews and an online public poll* - found the needs of investors' children play a role in property purchases but less so than retirement needs. Creating an asset that they could pass on to their children was important for 79% of property investors, while providing somewhere for children to live was important to 57% of investors.

The survey also revealed that many 'negative gearers' are expecting to carry large debts into retirement. About one third of those who negative gear a property also expecting to carry more than $100,000 of debt into retirement, compared to 8 per cent of those without an investment property, and 11 per cent of those with a non-g geared investment property.

AIST CEO Eva Scheerlinck said the survey confirmed that housing affordability was a significant concern to most Australians, including those heading into retirement.

"The long-held assumption that the home is a safety net for retirees is becoming increasingly dubious as more older people are being forced to rent or use their super to reduce their mortgage in retirement," Ms Scheerlinck said.

Ms Scheerlinck said it was time to re-examine the role of negative gearing and Capital Gains Tax concessions and for policymakers to consider proposals to modify these measures. Ms Scheerlinck said negative gearing had been shown to fuel house price rises, adding that the measure directed Government tax expenditure into unproductive assets.

"Unlike superannuation - where investments are spread across a diverse range of assets, including infrastructure and, increasingly affordable housing - the majority of tax expenditure on negative gearing flows into unproductive, existing housing."

Dr Rebecca Huntley, head of research at Essential Media, said fear of not having enough to retire on was driving property investment.

"The conversations in the qualitative stage with parents who negative gear show just how much they trust that their investment properties will support them in old age. And yet in order to invest they are moving into semi-retirement and retirement with debts. It's a risky strategy for some. As a result the children don't believe there will be much left down the track for the next generation to inherit," Ms Huntley said.

Driving down Anzac Avenue, you may have spotted the bright green Kindred signage on the side of the highway proudly pinpointing the location where Kindred have opened their second office.

The North Lakes and Surrounds office, officially opened on the 8th March 2018, is the second office for the independent property group, which began servicing the Redcliffe Peninsula in 2008.

“We are proud to have opened our North Lakes & Surrounds office and have a highly experienced team now working on the ground,” shares Josh Kindred, Principal of Kindred

“This year marks the 10-year anniversary for Kindred, so it’s fair to say we have been making a real difference in the North Lakes region for years now.”

“It was a really natural progression for us to offer our services right on the North Lakes and surrounding suburbs’ doorstep.”

The office, located at 1721 Anzac Avenue Mango Hill, is now open to the public and is headed by long-time real estate professional Steve McDade.

Josh also shares Kindred’s plans to continue expansion across the region, with the opening of additional offices in Deception Bay and the Sandgate area planned by June this year.

“We want to continue to make a real difference in our region, and the way we can do this is to provide services from the community’s doorstep.”

GOVERNMENT POLICY CONTRIBUTES TO AFFORDABILITY PROBLEMS

The current housing affordability crisis is the product of two decades of policy neglect according to Housing Industry Association Managing Director Shane Goodwin

"It is the core issue that HIA has championed fixing, and is responsible for the affordability challenge facing Australian cities." Mr Goodwin said.

"For too long governments have chosen quick fix options to the very long term problem of housing affordability. Australia needs brave and bold policies that go to the heart of the affordability problem."

"We need to resume the discussion around tax especially where it cascades applies to land and housing and put an end to upfront taxes that are keeping so many first home buyers out of the market."

"We need to get serious about planning reform, these things are the keys to solving housing affordability which have largely been overlooked by State and Federal Governments."

"We need all tiers of government back at the table, driving these discussions and implementing change."

"HIA has said for a long time now that the problem of housing affordability in simple terms, comes down to supply and demand - more land needs to be freed up, and the punitive taxes like stamp duty that come with buying a home need to be done away with."

"We need all tiers of government back at the table, driving these discussions and implementing change"

"State governments should take on policies like fixing planning rules to allow more homes to be built in inner and middle-ring suburbs of our largest cities, and continue to support the supply of new land around our cities to achieve the right balance of housing supply."

"It is pleasing that today's Grattan industry report mirrors HIA call for reform, but HIA cautions against any changes to migration."

"The problem of housing affordability is one of supply and demand - houses will not get built if the population doesn't grow, and the main driver of population growth in Australia is migration."

"Migration issues aside, HIA is urging State and Federal Governments to get moving on reform, rather than sticking to the current politically safe and largely ineffective measures of dealing with housing affordability," Mr Goodwin concluded."
